INDIAN HELD IN DOUBLE KILLING

RED CROSS, LEGION TO MEET ON DISASTER COMMITTEE PLAN

'ROUND 'N' 'ROUND

Human beings are very, very curious animals. One bit of success and they either patronize their friends or uptown them.

* * * *

Z is a baseball player, a product of the local schools.

* * * *

In high school he pitched for the local team—always standing upon the mound with a cool aloofness, with a sort of an air of "I Am The Great I AM."

* * * *

Yet, he was friendly with everybody, especially to the boy who caught for him three years against schools in the bay region.

* * * *

A Coast League scout picked Z and took him under his wing.

* * * *

His playing brought the acclaim of thousands. It tickled the fans to see this young kid go up on the mound and send experienced hitters to the bench via the strikeout route.

* * * *

In the meantime, the boy who had been his friend and his catcher during his high school years—a boy with baseball brains, that will sooner or later be recognized, was signed up by another Coast League club.

* * * *

A few months after Z was sold to a major league club, to be delivered the next season, he met his old pal at a Los Angeles ball park. Z was pitching for the visiting team and his pal was catching for the home team.

* * * *

Z nodded very coldly to his friend, and from that on refused to be seen in his company.

* * * *

Toay Z is with a major league club.

* * * *

His pal is still working hard to make the grade that leads to a big club.

* * * *

Z has few friends, his pal has many.

* * * *

And then, there is X.

* * * *

X in high school was a good friend. He traveled with three other boys—one an Italian, another a Mexican

EX DETECTIVE TALKS TO SCOTS

An insight into the life of the criminal and the war between the criminals and the police was given to members of St. Andrew's society of Richmond and vicinity last night, by Duncan Matheson, city treasurer of San Francisco, and chief of detectives in San Francisco for 12 years.

Matheson declared that "empty churches indicate full jails," and told the gathering that the only possible solution to the criminal wave which has been sweeping the United States, lies in the Parent-Teacher associations, Boys' and Girls' clubs of any nature, and in the Sunday schools."

The former detective chief painted a verbal panorama of the recent prison riots, and regaled his hearers with detective and racketeer stories.

Interest Children

"The problem," Matheson said, "is to interest the younger generation in the Sunday schools, the boy's and girl's clubs. When you can do this, the churches will be fuller and the jails emptier."

Last night was Canadian night at the society meeting, and the entire program was under the direction of those members born in Canada.

Billy Brown, chairman of the evening, was born in the same little town in Nova Scotia as was Matheson, and it was through his efforts that the San Francisco city treasurer was present.

Other members of the committee in charge of the evening were Hugh Smith, Robert Small and James Smith.

Program Held

Matheson's talk was preceded by a program which was opened with vocal solos by Mrs. George Clark, accompanied by Mrs. Alexander Dawson. A skit, "Rosalie" was presented by Mrs. W. W. Chapman, Mrs. Charles MacIntosh and Bert Scoble. Mrs. Billy Brown arranged for the presentation of the humorous play, and was complimented by the gathering for her efforts.

Refreshments were then served and the remainder of the evening was spent in dancing to tunes rendered by "Mac's" orchestra.

It was announced last night that the British Benevolent Society of Oakland, will hold its annual concert and dance at the Elks club in Oakland, May 24.

He was hurried to his home on the campus in the automobile of Dr. L. F. Schmidt, deau of the medical school, who attributed the attack to a recurrence of an infection which Dr. Campbell suffered some time ago.

"Dr. Campbell has been overdoing for a long time, but he is fundamentally all right and is in no serious danger providing he takes life easy until his strength is completely regained," he said.

Sixty-eight year old Dr. Campbell is scheduled to retire July 1 as head of the school, and to devote his time to astronomy, in which his fame is widespread.

The collapse occurred before a vast throng of students, faculty and visitors gathered in the memorial stadium for the graduation exercises of the largest class in U. C. history.

TWO BODIES FOUND AT MACHINE

MARIPOSA, May 14.—UP—Joe Rube, an Indian World war veteran, was placed under arrest today for investigation in connection with the murders of two Indians, found dead near El Portal, on the Yosemite highway.

Those dead were a man and his wife, Billy and Lena Wilson, both about 45 years old.

They were found today in their automobile, about three miles from El Portal. Wilson had been shot to death, while his wife's body was nearby, with a battered skull.

Indian Held

Rube was found in the vicinity in an allegedly intoxicated condition with a cut on his head which he was unable to explain.

He was arrested by Sheriff John J. Castagnetto, acting under instructions from District Attorney Lopis T. Milburn, and was taken to Mariposa.

Chris Brown, young son of Mrs. Wilson by aformer marriage, told the district attorney that all the Indians had attended a funeral at Madera.

Search Made.

On their way home, the Wilsons, together with Rube, stopped off in Merced, where they were believed to have purchased some whiskey.

Brown and some companions drove on ahead to the Indian ranch. When the trio failed to appear today, a search was begun, which resulted in the finding of the bodies.

The double murder was the third mysterious death within a short period in this region.

Body Found.

April 1, the body of Billy Lances was found in the Merced river after his car had unaccountably plunged from the highway.

A link between the two cases was seen in the fact that Wilson was to have testified soon at a Superior Court hearing in which John Brown, an uncle of Lances, who left a large estate, is contesting Lances' will, executed last December and bequeathing large sums to Abner A. Brown, a neighbor.

BARREL HOUSE, REFINERY 9'S PLAY SCORELESS TIE CONTEST

Everyone was grateful, everyone was disappointed, and everyone went home run-hungry yesterday afternoon when the Refinery and Barrel House decided to call it quits after battling for two fast, hard hours without being able to score a run.

Inning after inning went into the discard with the score still in the cellar. Then the faint hope of an early supper spread through the packed bleachers in the last of the seventh inning when Fitzgerald and Gillan succeeded in getting on base for the Barrel House with two outs. But when Cola popped out to Bartram, the grandstand crowd began to settle down for a nice exciting inning of strenuous baseball. They got what they asked for, and more.

The Refinerymen were quickly dispatched in the first of the eighth, and the Barrel House swatters nerved themselves for the crisis. Buttisbach started the bombardment rather weakly by popping out to Lamarra. Charley Matteri took his walk after being hit by a pitched ball, and Art Schimpff popped out to Armentrout. Matteri stole second. Vianni then singled, sending Matteri to third. Fitzgerald was walked by Peacock. Things were looking fairly promising by this time for the Barrel House.

"Buzz" Whetzler took two nice hard slices at the pellet, and received three balls. All eyes were glued, pinned, and riveted on "Spike" Elder and his iron mask. Peacock wound up for the supreme effort—and "Buzz" struck out.

Once more the baseball enthusiasts of Richmond heaved a great, hungry sigh, and braced themselves for the next thrill that the teams down there on the First street diamond would offer them.

A cloud appeared on the horizon for the Refinery in the form of a strike-out by Peacock. Tony Lamarra fouled out to Vianni, sending one more cloud to add to the despondency of the Refinery athletes. But Bartram singled, and Lane walked, and things were setting pretty for the Refinery. "Red" Johnson, a heavy hitter, got up to bat, but was prevented from displaying his slugging ability when Bartram was caught running back to second base by Battisbach and Gillan.

The Refinery returned to center of the battle field determined to repeat their own performance but with the Barrel House as the goat in this case. They succeeded. First Anthony Moitoza fanned. Then a high fly by Gillan was brought to naught by a sensational catch by Bertoli.

The faltering hopes of the Barrel House boys suddenly rose when Doyle Taylor, pinch hitting for Cola slammed the ball toward the right field fence. The leather sphere landed in the vicinity of Bertoli, bounced against the fence, and bounced back again to Bertoli, who threw to Bartram at second to end the scoreless contest.

If the Standard Oil baseball athletes continue to offer the thrills prevalent at last night's battle, the First street bleachers will have to be enlarged.

Buttisbach, Barrel House twirler, pitched a great one hit game. Buttisbach was well supported by a wide-awake fielding squad that patrolled its teritory with unfailing vigilance. Peacock, also made a nice job of the pitching end of the game for the Refinery, allowing but four hits and whiffing six Barrel House sluggers.

The All-Standards and Mechanics will furnish the action in tonight's Standard Oil Twilight baseball league offering at five o'clock on the First street lot.

Carnera Ban By 28 States To Be Asked

CHICAGO, May 14.—UP— A recommendation that Primo Carnera and his four managers, Leo See, Willia Duffy, Walter Friedman and Frank Churchill, be suspended indefinitely by the National Boxing Commission, was forwarded today to President Stanley Isaacs, of Cincinnati, by a committee appointed to investigate the Italian heavyweight's American appearances.

"After an exhaustive investigation," he said the report sent by Gen. John V. Clinin, of the Illnois Athletic Comission and chairman of the committee, the committee believes there has been a definite conspiracy to defraud and recommends that for the best interests of boxing and the public that Carnera and his managers be suspended indefinitely."

The suspension, which President Isaacs is expected to order immediately, will be effective in 28 states. The only main boxing centers not affected would be New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts. New York already has suspended the huge Italian.

The report was several thousand words long and covered every fight Carnera engaged in while touring the United States. In addition to General Clinnin, Walter H. Litsinger, of Milwaukee, and Donald E. Donohue of Hartford Conn., were members of the committee.

"We are of the one conclusion," the finding stated, "that P. T. Barnum was correct in his analysis of the American public. It likes to be fooled."

Mrs. D'Arcy Gets Second Divorce Decree

LOS ANGELES, May 14.—UP—Temperamental outbursts that centered about such things as laundry bags and coffee cups were told by Mrs. Laura Rhinock Guisti today when she obtained her second divorce from Roy Guisti, known on the screen as Roy D'Arcy.

"Once I left the laundry bag on the floor and he threw all the coffee cups on the floor and smashed them," Mrs. Guisti explained to Superior Judge Edward Bishop. Another time he shouted he thought he would kill us both."

"I am mostly sorry because I let him take me in twice. I should have known better after our first marriage."

Mrs. Guisti ran briefly through her romance with the screen villain. After their first divorce his engagement to Lita Grey Chaplin, divorced wife of Charlie Chaplin, was rumored, but ended suddenly when he remarried Mrs. Guisti in Tiajuana a year ago.

Then, she said, they went to New York, where D'Arcy had a vaudeville engagement. He began to stay out until all hours without explanation, was temperamental and refused to give his wife money, she complained.

Students To Attend Trade Meet In L. A.

Richmond Union high school will be represented at the 17th annual Foreign Trades convention next week at Los Angeles by Walter Thomas and Edward Horton. Horton is a member of the high senior class, while Thomas is a low senior. Both are members of the foreign trade class recently started at the local high school.

They will be students in the student travel bureau, organized to promote the study of foreign trade, and will go as the accredited delegates to the big conclave in the south, which will run Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of next week.

Plans to feature the students at the convention are being made by James A. Farrell, national president, according to word reaching Aubrey Wilson of Richmond, president of the student travel bureau.

It is understood that the full plan of the bureau will be explained at the convention and national recognition given to Richmond where the idea originated.

The trip to Los Angeles is to be in lieu of the contemplated annual voyage to foreign countries which hereafter is to be the reward of a selected number of students successful in the foreign trade courses. Rucker said the time is too limited to arrange for a trip to a foreign country this summer.

The foreign trade is now being organized and the students enrolled and that this branch of study will have a definite place in the school curriculum next summer. Through an arrangement with shipping companies successful students will receive free trips during the vacation period.

Poppies Will Be Sold For Disabled Vets

SAN FRANCISCO, May 14.—California-made poppies, fashioned by disabled veterans in the various government hospitals in this state will constitute a big proportion of the poppies to be sold throughout the nation on May 24, "Poppy Day" by the women of the American Legion auxiliary to raise funds for child welfare work and for aid to the thousands of veterans in government hospitals.

Officials of the American Legion auxiliary expect to sell 10,000,000 poppies in the various states of the union on May 24, according to Ethel M. Flynn, secretary of the California department of the auxiliary and Mrs. Margaret Kaeding of Glendale, president. The poppies to be sold by the Legion's auxiliary are all made by disabled veterans who are not drawing compensation from the federal government and the proceeds will be used exclusively for the child welfare work of the American Legion auxiliary and in the various government hospitals.

California veterans have already turned out more than 200,000 poppies for sale in this state. The poppies to be sold, throughout the nation are made in California and 12 other states in which government hospitals for the care of the World War veterans are located.

Governor Young will open the California poppy sale on May 24 with a radio address appeal to the people of this state and the surrounding sister states. He will explain the work of the American Legion's auxiliary in the poppy sale.

"The entire proceeds from the sale of our poppies goes directly to the benefit of the disabled veterans and their dependents," Mrs. Flynn explains. "The disabled men who made the poppies are paid three cents each in California for their work and the remainder of the funds is devoted to aiding those veterans and their dependents or their families in obtaining comforts and necessary aid where the government does not make provision for their care," she states.

The 381 posts of the American Legion in California have been directed by State Commander Clarence L. Kincaid to lend aid to the women's auxiliary in the poppy sale drive.

500,000 FIRE WRECKS BIG WAREHOUSE

CHICAGO, May 14.—UP—Spontaneous combustion in 200,000 bushels of rye stored in an historic grain elevator on the banks of the Chicago river started a spectacular fire tonight which caused damage estimated at $500,000.

Within 15 minutes after the blaze was discovered in the elevator, built 32 years ago, 50 fire fighting units were called into service.

Blazing brands blew over the section, threatening particularly a huge lumber yard, 80,000 gallons of raw linseed oil, 1000 freight cars and many ware houses.

There was no hope of saving the grain or the elevator. The firmen were deployed to prevent a spread. Two warehouses across the river caught fire and $10,000 damage was done in the lumber yard by another outbreak.

The chief battle was directed against spread to the oil tanks, which were only 150 yards northeast of the elevator. Fortunately the wind was very light, and the sheet of water played on the tank prevented its catching fire.

A crowd of more than 100,000 was attracted by the blaze.

AIR THRILLER AT LOCAL THEATER

Men who laugh at death and dare everything for love people Paramount's thrilling drama of the war aces, 'Young Eagles.' Charles. Buddy Rogers is the star, the same Buddy who provided most of the romance and thrills in the daring war aviation epic, "Wings" and William Wellman directed. "Young Eagles' will be the smash-hit entertainment at the Fox-California theater, for two days, starting today.

While "Wings" was, primarily, the story of friendship between brother pilots in the American air force, 'Young Eagles" immortalizes the spirit of knight errantry which existed between the opposing pilots. These intrepid warriors of the skies battled ferociously and defied death daringly, yet they always insisted on a fair victory in a fair fight. There was a spirit of good fellowship between the opposing aces, and this spirit "Young Eagles" has captured.

Buddy is the American ace who, in a thrilling air duel, brings down the redouptable Paul Lukas within the American lines. Buddy is assigned to convey Lukas to Paris where the secret service agents believe they can worm military secrets from him. Buddy and Lukas become good friends on the journey. In Paris, Buddy meets and falls in love with Jean Arthur. She dupes him, however; aids Lukas' escape, and leaves with him. Embittered, Buddy returns to the front. Later he meets Lukas in the air and brings his plane down in flames. Lukas tells him that Jean was working under instructions from the American secret service in Paris.

In addition to these three well-known and popular actors, the cast includes Stuart Erwin, who provided such a riot of fun as the dumb 'Axel" of "Sweetie." Hundreds of dare-devil pilots stunt and zoom and zip in the air battle sequences, and an array of seasoned troupers play the character roles. Frank Ross, Jack Luden, Freeman Wood Gordon de Main George Irving and Stanley Blystone are in the cast.

Also on this program is a Mack Sennett comedy entitled "Scotch" and a Kiddie Cabaret.

PRIVATE LIVES of SCREEN STARS

BY SHELLEY FORD

Probably the most widely publicized man in modern American life is The King Of Jazz, Paul Whiteman.

Everybody is familiar with his career. His rotound jovial face is a household institution. From one end of the country to the other and in European citadels of classical music, Paul and his gang have established the popular supremacy of jazz.

Paul Whiteman

Pictures before have been built around personal history But until The King Of Jazz none so truly depicted the glamour and romance of stage, concert platform, ballroom and night club life. No title ever so acutely fitted its opus.

Paul Whiteman's private life really ceased simultaneously with his first real triumph, years ago, at the Alexandria Hotel, Los Angeles. Since those thrilling days, his life has been altogether public. He has lived just as he does in The King Of Jazz—surrounded by famous people, constantly in a whirl of beautiful girls—always in an atmosphere of mirth and melody.

Could he have a private life? Hardly! Everywhere he goes, he is hailed as a reigning monarch.

Paul Whiteman has only one life. You can know it as well as I. You, too, can see it in The King Of Jazz. It's all there. The things he has to do. The things he'd like to do. An open book, for you and all to read.

The stars of the picture, John Boles, Jeanette Loff, Laura La Plante, Myrna Kennedy, Glenn Tryon, Kathryn Crawford, Grace Hayes, William Kent and a host of others, typify the celebrities who are part of his daily life. The hundreds of alluring girls are really just a part of the mob that characterizes his ordinary hurly-burly existence.

Strangely, he waxes fat. Smiling, debonair, good-natured, The King of Jazz has a cordial welcome for all. No matter how hectic the day, he never steps out of his charming personality. Early in the morning, at odd moments during the day, late at night, Paul is just the same. Temperament—a quality so commonly associated with genius is completely absent in his case. Naturally, to maintain the excellent standard of his organization, discipline is necessary, but it's the rule of reason, not force, that applies.

Paper Gowns At Farmerette Meet

CORVALLIS, Mont., — What if it had rained, or what if there had been a windstorm? Or what if someone had flipped a lighted match in the wrong place?

But none of these occurred and the ingeniuos women of Corvallis triumphed.

Just before a library benefit, the choral leader ruled that evening gowns must be worn. Chorus members were distressed. They were just farm women and few, if any, boasted evening drsses.

Came the night of the benefit and lo, and behold! the chorus turned out resplendently attired in stylish black evening gowns that rustled audibly as the women waked towards the stage.

The secret was too good to keep. All this sartorial elegance, all this metropolitan splendor, was made of nothing more or less than plain black crepe paper.

Just Crazy Men?

VETS TO HOLD EMERGENCY TESTS

SAN FRANCISCO, May 14.—Throughout California, from May 15 to 31, World War veterans of the American Legion's 381 posts, will stage a simulated "state-wide emergency mobilization" test and make quick plans for handling an imaginary "disaster" in their respective counties. The test is a part of the community service program of the American Legion and will be held under the direction of the department emergency commission of the Legion, headed by Chas. P. Daly of Ventura.

The May mobilization is a "rehearsal" for a later statewide test which will be carried on by the American Legion as a part of a national emergency mobilization.

Under the plans as worked out by the Legion officials, citizens and organizations in the various communities will be asked to aid the Legionnaires in the mobilization. A rapid check-up of the imaginary disaster that has "befallen" each community will be made, designating the number of persons in jeopardy, the number of homeless, the number to be taken care of such as feeding, housing, etc., and whatever outside aid is "needed." The Legion heads in the various communities will then report to the state officials of the organization and rapid plans wil then be made to care for the situations reported.

State Commander Clarence L. Kincaid of Hollywood has called attention to the work of the American Legion in the St. Francis dam disaster in southern California and the Mill valley fire in Marin county and similar emergencies and has urged the members of his organization to be prepared for community work of similar character should occasion arise.

Cancellation Of G. G. Span Hearing Asked

SAN FRANCISCO, May 14—UP—Steps were taken today to force cancellation of the rehearing on the Golden Gate bridge project.

Intercession of Secretary of War, Patrick Hurley, was sought in urgent messages to Washington. Among the messages was one from William P. Filmer, president of the board of directors of the joint bridge and highway district.

Secretary of War Weeks granted permission for the construction of the span December 26, 1924. For this reason, proponents of the bridge are at a loss to understand the calling of a new hearing before army engineers to permit objectors again to voice their opposition.

Bridge advocates in their messages to Hurley asked that the new and unexpected barrier to the construction of the bridge be swept aside by cancellation of the proposed hearing.

Another resolution urged immediate adoption of a national building program for increased hospitalization facilities at National soldiers' homes of hospitals.

Officers who were announced as elected are:

RELGION, RACE HATRED STIR ALL INDIA

By WEBB MILLER
(U. P. Staff Correspondent)
(World Copyright, 1930, UP)

KARACHI, India, May 14.—UP—Religion and the racial bitterness which it has aroused are predominant factors in India's political and social life today, as they have been for centuries.

On the political side of the present upheaval, religious figures heavily. Both the Hindu and the Mohammedan nationalist leaders are making every effort to compose their differences and enable the two great religious bodies to work in cooperation against British rule.

They would bury their bitterness in the common clause looking toward home rule or independence for India, but this far they have met with little success. Even these leaders are convinced that while the racial antagonism remains, India's forces will continue to be divided.

Many Differences

Only twice in history have the Hindus and Mohammedans buried their hatreds and worked together against British rule. The first instance was during the great mutiny of 1857. The second was after the great war, when they joined hands in agitation in behalf of the Turkish Caliphate against harsh treatment by the allies of the head of the Moslem faith. At that time, the Moslems joined the non-cooperation movement of Mahatma Ghandi, recently imprisoned, as pressure against the government.

In both instances the cooperation was brief. It was for specific purposes, after which the age-old antagonisms arose again.

This bitterness frequently breaks out despite anything the leaders can do. The newspapers this week gave wide publication to reports that Mohammedan policemen at Jolapur were roped together, saturated with gasoline and burned. This is certain to have wire repercussion throughout Mohammedan India.

Religious Riots.

So-called communal riots or religious clashes have resulted in more bloodshed than any other cause since British rule was established. The riots usually start over the killing by Mohammedans of cows which the Hindus hold sacred, or Hindu processions playing music near Mohammedan mosques.

The refusal of Mohammedans to close their shops or refuse to observe Hartals—religious strikes—or political mourning days during the present uprisings, has resulted in several fights.

In conversations with Mohammedan leaders here, they have emphasized that the Hindus have about a 70 per cent majority in and democratic form of government. The Mohammedans would have to demand guarantees for security and protection of their culture, religion and language, and as a result, in the main, they prefer British rule to Hindu rule.

Many Hindus

The Hindus, aside from their numbers, have many advantages over the Mohammedans in education and contact with British institutions. The Hindus started the National Congress movement while the Mohammedans held off. The latter, likewise, refrained from taking advantage of western education.

Finally, in 1906, the Mohammedans founded the all-India Moslem League in opposition to the Hindu National Congress.

Today, advanced Mohammedans are demanding home rule, but their demand is overshadowed by the fear that British raj, or rule, would simply be replaced by the Hindu raj. Of the 320,000,000 persons in India, 200,000,000 are being counted as Hindus and 70,000,000 as Mohammedans. However, the Hindus are divided into castes, including 60,000,000 of the so-called "untouchables." These latter are so downtrodden by the upper castes that they scarcely figure politically at present.

RAGS WANTED RECORD-HERALD

"JAKE" VICTIMS STILL SUFFER IN K. C.

KANSAS CITY, May 14.—UP—Visions of wobbly legs and painful joints come surging to the minds of drinkers of the southwest these days when they hoist their glasses for a convivial "nip" of hard liquor, and as a result the beer business has taken a decided spurt.

With federal grand juries meeting in gin many cities of Kansas and Oklahoma, returning almost daily indictments against alleged violators of the liquor laws, imbibers are taking no chances this spring.

With every indictment on the charges of selling sub-standard jamaica ginger — a very popular drink until people began waking up the morning after and finding themselves unable to move — a few more hardened "likker" drinkers hasten to the nearest bottling supply store, lay in a supply of beer-making paraphenalia, and start out to do some private brewing.

Daily reports from hospitals and sanitoriums which disclose that very little improvement is being shown by "jake" vicitms after being paralyzed several weeks, add little to the peace of mind of those who would drink.

So far more than two score have been indicted by federal grand juries in various cities of the southwest and charged with conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws. Most of these are druggists many of whom are said to have served jamaica ginger over their fountains as "soft" drinks, as well as dispensing the liquor in bottles.

Two wholesale druggists, Dr. Richard Ray, of Kana City, and William Davis, general manager of the wholesale firm of Davis & Company, St. Louis, were named in indictments recently returned by a grand jury in Oklahoma City. Investigators allege that much of the poison "jake" which flooded the southwest, was handled thru these two firms. Some of the liquor is said to have been manufactured in Boston and chemists reports showed that that particular brand contained as high as 2 per cent wood alcohol. Oklahoma City still has about 500 persons suffering from "jake joint."

In Wichita, Kansas, where the "jake" epidemic hit perhaps the hardest, victims trek daily to the slush ponds of the oil wells on the outskirts of the city, there to bathe in the oily mud and hope for the best. No cures have been reported, however.

Springfield, Mo., had its quota of "jake" sufferers, and several cases were reported in Kansas City, most of which were said to have been contracted during visits to either Wichita or Oklahoma City. In Holdenville, Okla., seven druggists and drug store employes were indicted.

Due to the fact that the poisonous qualities of the ginger are attributed to the alcohol used, even the synthetic gin business has fallen off this spring, for after watching several hundred "jakes" hobbling around the streets, the southwestern drinkers are perfectly satisfied to confine their drinking to home brew.

GREAT WESTERN P. G. MERGER APPROVED

SAN FRANCISCO, May 14.—As the first step toward complete merger of four bay region utilities, the State Railroad Commission today authorized the Pacific Gas and Electric company to acquire control of the Great Western Power company and its subsidiaries, the San Joaquin Light and Power corporation and the Midland Counties Public Service corporation.

Commissioner William J. Carr, in commenting on the merger, declared the consumers would benefit by the merger in cheaper rates on electricity and that if the P. G. & E. failed to make reductions the commission would take steps to see that they were made. He stated that economies of from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000 annually would result from the consolidation and that outstanding capitalization and floating indebtedness of the companies involved would be reduced by $22,000,000.

As a result of the decision, the P. G. & E. will acquire about 62 percent of the outstanding Great Western stock, about 52 percent of the San Joaquin outstanding stock, and all of the Midland Counties stock at a cost of $42,625,000.

A request by the P. G. & E. to acquire additional stock, properties and business of the three companies was dismissed because the applicant failed to show on what terms it proposes to acquire or what it intends to pay for the additional stock or property.

"While we believe the consolidation of the properties should follow the acquisition of their control through stock ownership, we cannot on the record before us either authorize application to acquire properties of the aforesaid companies, or determine whether the cost of properties to applicant may be charged to capital account and curent assets," the decision said.

Y Boys Will Hold Big Camp Rally Tonight

Reminiscences of experiences in the old swimmin' hole in Mendocino county will be exchanged tomorrow night by boys who have attended Richmond's Y. M. C. A. camp on the Russian river. The rally will be held in the Y. M. C. A. building at 7:15 o'clock. It is an annual event that precedes each year's Camp Pioneer.

The old camp songs will be led by Willie Hillier last year's song leader at the summer camp. George Harlow, camp spiritual director, will present a talk entitled "Bigger and Better." An issue of the "Boomerang," the daily camp paper read every night at the camp fire, will be read at tomorrow's rally by James Smith, editor of last year's publication.

Reynold Carlson, camp director, will preside over the rally. The affair will conclude before eight o'clock, in order that the boys may attend the Variety Show being presented at Richmond Union high school the same evening.

This year's Y. M. C. A. camp will start on June 9, and will continue until June 21. The camp site will be the same as that used for six years by the local campers. It is situated on the Russian River five miles from the town of Hopland. Several tent leaders of former years are expected to be present at this yar's camp.

THE WOMAN OF IT

By Marguerite Mooers Marshall

If Lindbergh Can Do It, Why Can't Other Men?

NO, WE don't mean that other men, all of them, can make trans-continental or trans-oceanic flights. Flying doubtless is Col. Lindbergh's supreme and, for the present, unapproachable achievement. What we should have done was to insert another word in the heading of this piece, so that it might inquire, between pathos and indignation, "If Lindbergh Can Do It, Why Can't Other MARRIED Men?" If Lindbergh can, and does, make his wife an active sharer and companion in his work, why can't other husbands do likewise? Because Anne Morrow Lindbergh isn't the only wife who would love such sharing.

MARGUERITE MOOERS MARSHALL

The Lindberghs have been married nearly a year and they were hardly home from their honeymoon before the Colonel was going on with what he had begun before marriage—the cultivation of air-mindedness in the girl of his choice. He not only took her with him into the air. He himself taught her how to fly, encouraged her to make solo flights. He gave her an intimate, important part to play in his "shop," in the job which—as with many Americans—is the great enthusiasm of his life. She was his co-navigator in the record-breaking cross-country trip which he has just made.

Lindbergh doubtless wearied, long ago, of being hailed as an admirable example to his countrymen; nevertheless, we must once more call him that, for his demonstration of how to make a wife an active partner in her husband's affairs. If other young couples would follow the example of the Lindberghs, there would not be, between them, that division of interest which may lead to a division of affections.

FROM the beginning, Lindbergh often, if not always, took his wife with him when he went to his work. Metaphorically, though perhaps not literally, many another husband might do the same thing.

He cannot, it may be, take his bride to his office or factory—especially if he is a subordinate employee. But he can take her, in spirit, into his working life. He can talk to her about his job—what he is doing, what he wants to do, his handicaps, his triumphs, the background of his place of employment, his wages or profits, his chances of promotion, everything in his work that really interests him. It will interest his wife, too, if she loves him and if she is even moderately intelligent. The unity of the partnership will be increased enormously.

Unfortunately, many a husband, instead of taking his wife into his working life, shuts her out from it. He may do so with the old idea of "sheltering" her from harsh knowledge of a man's world—although that idea really is pretty old stuff nowadays. He may think she wouldn't "understand"—instead of trying her, to find out. He may selfishly and suspiciously prefer to keep "business affairs" to himself—in which case he should never have taken a matrimonial partner.

OF SO unfrank and unfriendly a policy there are various bad results. One of the commonest of these is extravagance on the part of the wife, extravagance due simply to her ignorance of her husband's financial position and prospects. We know more than one woman whose mate has bluffed her so long and so successfully about his salary that she runs up bills over which he groans monthly.

A man may complain that, if he could save, he could buy an interest in some business, instead of working as a mere hired man. How often does he talk over with his wife this perfectly legitimate ambition, explaining his hopes in detail and asking her co-operation in putting aside the money which may help him to realize them? Any sympathetic, sensible woman responds to such an appeal from her husband—why does he refuse to make it?

"I don't want to worry her," he'll say. Or, "she has enough to do, thinking about the children."

Rubbish! A woman has the right to worry about her husband's affairs. Her interest in them, if encouraged by his frankness and his desire for full co-operation, will be so firmly established before the children come that, afterward, they will not elbow him out. That's as it should be, since children grow and go but husband and wife stay—if they are full, true partners. It's the woman cheated of such partnership who tries to find compensation in too intensive mothering, or in playing bridge, or in being president of the woman's club, or in some other unsatisfactory substitute for real wifehood.

The most beautiful synonym for "wife" is the old one, "helpmate." How can a woman live up to the meaning of the word unless she understands and shares—with brain and heart, if not with hand—in the working side of her husband's life? How can she help her mate if she doesn't understand his work?

It is up to him to make her understand. Lindbergh points the way.

AN EVEN GREATER TRAGEDY

(With apologies to Martin Panzer)

You write stuff
That YOU think is good
But you laugh off
The suggestion of your friends
To "send it in."
Then one day,
Without telling a soul,
You DO send one of your best poems
To a column in a newspaper with a huge circulation.
The following day—
And for MANY, MANY days thereafter—
You can hardly wait till five o'clock.
You snatch THE paper from the subway newsstand.
Each day, with renewed hope
And much poking of your fellow strap-hangers,
You frantically turn pages,
Ignoring glaring headlines
Of such unimportant things as riots and fights,
And never stop until you reach THE page.
You hold your breath!
Your head bows in one swift glance!
You sigh hopelessly . . .
And then relax . . . until to-morrow.

Galliera Clasps on Necklaces

GALLIERA clasps on pearl necklaces add to their already universal charm. The handsome side drape necklace is enhanced when the clasp is in a galliera motif of beautifully cut rhinestones and carved three-tone stones. Suitable for afternoon or evening is a short necklace in which three front strands are joined to the two back strands by means of these decorative clasps. The drop earrings and bracelet match. Gunmetal and white pearl combination make a necklace of the cluster motif type and a bracelet that sets snugly on the wrist in the ruff fashion.

A plain rope of pearls may be brought up to date by means of a galliera and pearl clip. This may be used as a back clasp making a three strand necklace of a rope, or the pearls can be draped in place and held at the side with a clip. Two clips make a back and front ornament on the rope of pearls by simply clipping the drape into the desired effect.

Pastel Hosiery

IN the accomplishment of definite color effects in summery sports costumes made of linen, hosiery should be in a matching tone if you like to follow the latest dictates of fashion. Sheer chiffon stockings with the picot top and the panel-curve heel are appearing in the shops in green, blue, yellow, and even orange shades—with the distinctive linen suit or frock.

Blouses Add Brilliancy to Suits— Which to Choose; How to Wear It

Pique in the Chanel Manner Goes With the Mannish Tailored Suit of Sharkskin

By Ann Roberts

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

IF YOU are one of those dress and coat addicts, then this news about blouses isn't going to give you too great a thrill.

But maybe you can be converted and maybe you are young—too young to know what bliss a blouse can bring with it into the life of any woman.

There are so many reasons why blouses are good this season and so many good blouses. I have canvassed the style centres trying to find one note of disapproval for the fashion among those whose opinion counts for something. But there is only enthusiasm in the courts of blouse knowledge.

When you know more about the newer ones, you will know why.

Enter the Lingerie Blouse

TO-DAY there are silk suits and suits of light woolens—all made softly with simple studied lines. These are popular beyond description and they play up the blouse with a perfection that has never before been dreamed of.

They bring that most perfect of all suit assets, the lingerie blouse, into bold relief and make it an outstanding fashion of the season. When you have seen these blouses and worn them you will add your prayers that it is a fashion which has come to stay.

Why there are blouses that are so handmade they bring tears to the eyes of all those who love the beauty of this most feminine of all expressions. You see hand tucking, fagotting, edgings of real lace, ruffling, applique, hemstitching, pleated jabots. There are plastrons of handwork. And the materials—these range from handkerchief linen in finest texture through dotted swiss, printed dimity, voile, flat crepe, &c.

Vested in Pique

FOR the tailored suit—the suit that sticks closely to mannish lines and is made of sharkskin or some other mannish material, there is one blouse that holds its own above all others. That is the blouse of pique made in the Chanel manner.

If you know what Chanel means to blouses, you are pretty well fashion-wise. If you don't, I will tell you that her influence in this direction is something to be highly respected, and that little thing called "Chanel type blouse" is sketched at the foot of this article. You see it is flat and buttons over squarely below the long lapels. It is hand tailored, too, most correctly and this is only one of the many styles in which it is developed.

Now the pique for this sort of blouse, which sometimes is sleeveless, is not that heavy, stolid stuff that made your childhood dresses. It is an improved pique that speaks strictly in a modern language of softness and pliability while all of its character is retained. It will be popular for many things this summer, but just now for blouses it reigns supreme.

The colors are fascinating—all those shadowy shades of pastel which take on new meaning with the aid of this cotton weave. Opaline (that means the right pink) and white are the best. Then come water green, yellow and pale blue.

Shall the Blouse Be Coatless?

RIGHT here there is a point of blouse etiquette which must be faced squarely by the well dressed woman. Wear them right or don't wear them is the big idea.

For—once upon a time there was a shirt waist and skirt era—long before your day, my dear—when more ravages were committed in the name of the blouse than you have any idea of. Why, in those days, some women went without their suit coats quite promiscuously and they had bunches around their waistlines to account for which were nobody's business.

That sort of outrage belongs to the dark ages, of course. Now we are all too "style conscious" as the saying goes, to allow of any such insult to a good designer's designs. But remember, heat or no heat, cling to the coat for dear life. The blouse with a suit is only to be glimpsed.

Strictly for Silk Suits

THE blouse reaches the height of its strictly feminine expression when it joints its softness with the silk suit.

Here it is made of crepe Elizabeth or chiffon in two layers and when it

THIS IS A CLASSIC TYPE OF HANDKERCHIEF LINEN BLOUSE, MADE WITH THE FRILL PLEATED AND EDGED WITH LACE AND HAND FAGOTTING TO ADD AN EXTRA TOUCH OF HANDWORK.

The Blouse Without the Coat Not to Be Thought of in This Season of Blouses of Many is not finished along the edges quite simply by hand, it has delicate touches of tinted lace about it.

There are plaid chiffons, too, or those that are delicately striped—these to be worn either with wool crepe or silk suits. One of wool crepe by Goupy was seen at the races. It had a striped chiffon blouse under a short bolero jacket and then the hat was a tight turban wound from the same chiffon from which the blouse was made.

These little filmy blouses often have short sleeves ending just above the elbow in a tight band with perky short ends left flying on the outside.

For young things there are blouses in this airy category made of net, embroidered or plain or printed and often they have cap sleeves or no sleeves at all.

The blouse with a cape raises its head in the upper range of the style class. It is gracefulness itself and often comes sleeveless. Then it is worn with a silk suit sometimes with the cape extending over the coat—this when the combination of blouse and suit is well thought out as to design and color combination.

The satin blouse for the moment is out. There are rumors of its early return for late summer and early fall with the heavy silk suit. However, that is a bridge you will not have to cross until you come to it.

Watch the Waistline

BLOUSES are adaptable enough in this, their new interpretation, to be worn either in or out at the waistline. And on your own head be it if you wear yours wrong.

Stoutish of figure? Never commit the mistake of tucking in the blouse.

Shortish of figure? The same rule holds good.

But then the new blouses are made so that they fit over the top of the hips and over the skirt and blouse gracefully above that line. Then they melt into the skirt so that there is no consciousness of a break in the continuity of design. That is a help you must know.

The slight, straight, long figures can tuck theirs in to their heart's content, for this style is good with a capital G.

And I must register the fact here that for those whose figures are really broad and large the gilet, or that blouse which is only a front, is the one salvation. It removes a layer of stuff and allows the coat to fit with a perfection that can only call for cries of admiration.

Shirts for Sports

WOMEN are buying mannish and tailored blouses from their husbands' shirtmakers.

The blouse with a wing tie of the same material is seen over and over again among smart women who are sports spectators. The collars with these can be fastened close about the throat or worn a trifle lower if it is more becoming that way.

The materials are Shantung—end-to-end silk, heavy, washable crepe, although some of them have been seen in flannel and linen.

All are tailored in type, some with yokes. Box pleats extend from these yokes—two in back and three in front. They have turnover or Peter Pan collars, lower a bit in front.

The polo shirt with short sleeves is a season necessity. Every one will have one as they come in all the pastel colors. Really it is an extremely important fashion—so much so that its eulogy must be left for a later day.

Belts then come into their own with this sports style of blousing. They are best when made of saddler's leather with heavy metal buckles and are not more than an inch or a little over in width.

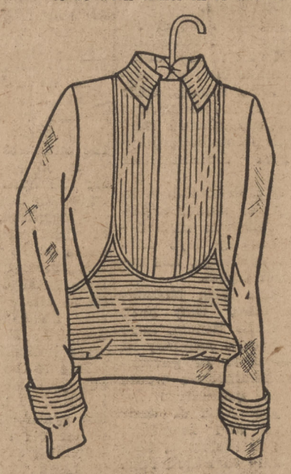
Sleeves Are in and Out

THE designs of the new blouses have so much variety, along with so much charm, that they quite set the head to spinning. Which shall you have you will be wondering, or shall you overcrowd your wardrobe with too intriguing blouses, which latter urge I am afraid will be the great female temptation.

You can have sleeves or three-quarter sleeves or half sleeves, for all of these are good. Suit your arms and your suit and help your figure to look its prettiest.



A FINE EXAMPLE OF THE NICEST OF CREPE ELIZABETH BLOUSES. THE VEST IS TUCKED WITH FINE HAND TUCKS AND THE BUTTONS ARE CUT CRYSTAL BALLS.

It Is Said

A tablespoonful of methylated spirit to each gallon of rinsing water will make tablecloths and napkins whiter and give them just the required stiffening to keep them clean longer.

A DISH A DAY

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

The groaning board of our grandmother's day has gone the way of hoopskirts and powdered wigs, to the accompaniment of cheers from the family doctor as well as the cook. Many years have passed since a housewife was considered frugal if she did not top off dinner with an assortment of pies and cakes. In fact, desserts have been discarded almost entirely by many families, except for occasional frozen sherbets of fresh fruit.

KAREN HOLLIS

Other families like some sweet trifle served with their coffee and this custom has brought back into favor many old-fashioned cookies and cakes. At tea time these have always been relished, but now they have attained the dignity of supplanting dessert.

One of the most delicious and simply-made desserts of this type is Date and Nut Squares, and as these remain fresh for several days, it is a good idea to make up a double supply of them to have on hand for luncheon or tea, or a between-meals snack for the children with a glass of milk.

DATE AND NUT SQUARES

2 eggs
1 cup powdered sugar
¾ cup pastry flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup pitted and chopped dates
1 cup chopped pecans

Beat the eggs and add the powdered sugar, mixing thoroughly. Sift the flour with the baking powder and add gradually. Stir in the dates and nuts and pour into a shallow, buttered pan. Bake in a slow oven (300 degrees) for forty minutes. Cut into squares while still hot.

Religion Satirized

Screen and stage are now being used in the Soviet fight against religion. Several films and a play directed against religion are now being shown in Moscow, and this is only a beginning. A series of other atheistic productions are in preparation. "We have learned that satire is stronger than dynamite," said a prominent film producer recently. "We intend to blast the foundation from under the church by exposing its tricks and absurdities." One of the new plays shows a group of adherents to the Protestant Church, all fairly well-to-do peasants, organizing a false collective farm and carrying on a fight against the true Bolshevik collective in the same village. It appears quickly enough that the religious community is led by people who are in touch with American co-religionists, and whose joint purpose is to wreck the Soviet Union. In the end the loyal peasants and the G. P. U. wipe this group off the face of the earth. This story seems crude enough, but the stage play is one of the strongest ever seen in Moscow, according to German correspondents writing home. A clever film has been achieved in "The Island of Refuge." In a remote part of Siberia there was recently discovered a colony of people dating back to the sixteenth century. It had been established by a religious group which apparently migrated to escape Czarist persecutions. Cut off from the rest of humanity for more than 300 years, the colony, now reduced to a small number, had retained their old customs intact. The film depicts the effect of the new Soviet ideas being brought into this isolated remnant of the past, the sixteenth and twentieth centuries face to face. Religion fares badly.

Woolen Stocking

The Frenchman has an international reputation for thrift, and despite many rumors that he has been living on his capital since the war, he is just as keen as ever on filling the "woolen stocking." During the recent floods little fortunes, which represented the savings of two or three generations, were swept away by the flood waters. They were those family hoards which, in the form of coin or banknotes, had been hidden in "safe places," often buried in gardens or under hearthstones. An intensive propaganda is now being carried on to teach the peasant the wisdom of using banks instead of hiding places. It is hoped that, as the result of an educational campaign, the woolen stocking in France will soon have disappeared in favor of the bank account or the insurance policy. One Sebator has devoted himself to teaching his fellows how much can be done with 1,000 francs. For instance, if a man on the birth of a son deposits 1,000 francs on his account into the national pension fund, the boy will be assured of a pension of nearly 4,000 francs a year on reaching the age of sixty years, or of 7,000 francs when he is sixty-five. That thousand francs, buried in the garden or hidden in a stocking in a cupboard would have remained only 1,000. The peasant is being taught to know money as well as vegetables.

INVESTIGATING VICE VERSA

If the wets could only get those Senate investigators on the stand:

MAJOR CURRAN — Now, Senator Brump, please tell us when you intend to pay for that suit you've got on.

SENATOR—Such impudence! Preposterous!

CURRAN—Shut your trap and answer the question!

SENATOR—I don't know what you refer to.

CURRAN—Oh, yes, you do. I have here a letter from your tailor that I found when I stole your files. He wants to know when you're going to pay for that suit.

SENATOR—I refuse to answer. My personal wardrobe has nothing to do with the lobbying you're investigating.

CURRAN—I know it, but it's good fun snooping into your private affairs. Now, Senator, was this a two-pants suit?

SENATOR—I rise to a question of personal privilege.

CURRAN—You have no privilege around here, you numbskull! Do you still owe for that fancy vest you've got on, too?

SENATOR—I refuse to answer.

CURRAN—Then it will have to go into the record that you owe for the suit you've got on as well as the fancy vest and probably even your undershirt. I think that is a fair interpretation.

SENATOR—You have no right to infer any such thing.

CURRAN—Senator, I'll do all the inferring I want to. You are on the stand only to be insulted, and I am simply doing my duty.

SENATOR—I protest at this indignity.

CURRAN—Now, Senator, I would like you to explain another thing I swiped from your files. Who is Maggie Wingle that you paid $1,167 to last year?

SENATOR—She is my washerwoman.

CURRAN—Oh, your washerwoman, eh? And you paid her $1,167 for what?

SENATOR—For washing my shirts.

CURRAN—Senator, I don't believe you own $11 worth of shirts.

SENATOR—I object. What has that got to do with this lobby inquiry?

CURRAN—In my mind it is closely related to the subject. Now, Senator, you are willing to let it stand you don't own $11 worth of shirts?

SENATOR—I refuse to answer.

CURRAN—I thought you'd finally admit it. Now, Senator Brump, in pawing over your private correspondence I came across another item that needs explaining. How about this receipted bill for $3.27?

SENATOR — That was for yeast cakes.

CURRAN—Whose yeast cakes?

SENATOR—Freshman's.

CURRAN—Oh, so you're linked up with the Freshman Company, are you?

SENATOR—Not at all. Theye were Freshman's yeast cakes, but I bought them from my grocer.

CURRAN—And you paid $3.27 for them?

SENATOR—Yes, sir; in cash.

CURRAN—In cash, eh? Then your credit isn't any good.

SENATOR—This is unfair and I protest.

CURRAN—These yeast cakes are very relevant to this lobby inquiry, Senator, and you must answer my questions as fast as I think them up. Now, Senator, what is the sinister meaning of this letter to your Aunt Hilda congratulating her on her birthday?

SENATOR—I just congratulated her; that's all.

CURRAN—Senator, I think you are a crook! That will be all for today.

School nurse says all girls should know this

TALKING to a roomful of high school girls on personal hygiene, an experienced district nurse said: "One of the basic rules of health for girls is to keep the system functioning naturally at all times. Normal exercise and diet habits should be encouraged. But when necessary there's no harm in taking nujol, since it works mechanically and can't disturb the normal functions of any organ of the body. Particularly with girls, there are times when nujol should always be taken. Take a spoonful every night for a few days. It's a thoroughly safe and harmless method. It won't cause distress or gas pains or griping."
Nujol is different from any other substance. It contains no drugs or medicine. It can be taken safely no matter how you are feeling because it is so pure and harmless, and works so easily. Every woman should keep a bottle on hand. Every druggist has this remarkable substance. Get the genuine.

GOLDEN DAWN

This story is based on Warner Bros. Vitaphone production of the play by Otto Harbach and Oscar Hammerstein II.

SYNOPSIS

Young Dawn, mystery girl, has been chosen by the black tribe to be the virgin bride of their god. She is forced to remain chained all night in the jungle. She loves Tom Allen, now a prisoner of war by the Germans, who have seized the territory. Tom has learned that she is really white, not black. Shep, whip-wielding bully, has sinister designs on Dawn, and means to consummate them while Dawn is helplessly chained. Tom stumbles on the place. Shep appears. Both men have a fight to the finish. Tom bucking with his fists the powerful whip of Shep.

INSTALLMENT THIRTEEN

Shep dragged himself away, incoherently muttering his thanks and promises of eternal good behavior. Tom hastened over and freed Dawn by pulling the stakes holding her chains from the ground, dispelling whatever magic Malunghu had exercised.

Dawn, who had given no thought to her appearance in the tumult that followed the arrival of the men, discovered with quick alarm that she was in a state of undress. Hastily gathering up her garments she flung them about her. She joined Tom on a huge flat rock and lost herself in his embrace.

"You're hurt,' she suddenly remembered.

"A little," Tom deprecated, carelessly wiping some blood from his

"I will not let you go, Dawn!"

throat. "Shep didn't hurt me much."

But Dawn didn't believe him. The punishment she had herself seen showered on him was all but unendurable.

"I'll help," she said. "I am a Red Cross girl."

"That's right, you are," Tom laughed.

The girl peered about for some sort of bandage. Discovering none, she picked up one of her discarded garments and prepared to rip it apart. Tom laid a restraining hand on hers.

"It's your wedding robe, Dawn," was his gentle reminder when she looked up.

He was tremendously happy. He knew he had no right to be and that rest and reflection would again reduce him to thinking of things as they really were. It was curious, he found, that so much misery and heartache must invariably intrude itself on happiness. Why did everything contrive to impose greater uphappiness on himself and Dawn?

None of these questions found answer within him, nor did he care to answer. Though overjoyed to have vanquished Shep, he felt no nearer to Dawn. There still remained Mooda, Malunghu, release from prison, Captain Eric— At the thought of Captain Eric he sat up so quickly he revived the pain in his bruises and cried out involuntarily.

"Did I hurt my Tom?" Dawn was contrite.

"No, Dawn," he assured her. "I just thought of something."

"It is sad, Tom?"

As he remained silent, she repeated her query. "It's really nothing," he said absently. Again he lay down to permit Dawn to continue her attention to him. Neither spoke for several moments.

"I promised Captain Eric I would go direct to the new camp," Tom commented briefly to break the silence. Dawn looked at him expectantly.

"I gave him my word of honor," Tom added regretfully. "Perhaps I should not have done so. I should have known, in my heart, that I would seek you out tonight. You are irresistible, Dawn. I will come to you no matter where you go. Always."

Dawn made no response, but pressed her cheek against his. She was torn by a fierce internal debate. There remained in her yet a shred of the superstition that the jungle folk had transplanted in her in childhood. But it was less a fear of the vengeance of Malunghu than a fear for Tom which stilled her tongue to the plea that he stay. She could not urge him to violate his pledge of honor.

"You rest a while, Tom," she suggested, "and soon you must go—to the new camp."

Tom was ashamed of the sting of disappointment her words sent through him. He found himself wondering if he would have been weak enough to flee the prison camp at the vaguest of encouragements from Dawn. He was jealous of his honor, willing to die for its preservation, and it frightened him to know that a word from this girl could induce him to toss it aside without regrets. Truly, he mused in the manner of all men, to love a woman is to invite disaster.

He upraised himself, indicating that he intended to depart. But Dawn rested her hand on his arm.

"Not now," she said. "We stay a little while—just a little while."

For some inexplicable reason, Tom felt the necessity of persuading her that he must leave at once or remain with her forever. But she knew just what thoughts were troubling him, and was prepared to answer his feeble arguments.

"What is just a little while—now?" demanded Tom, fretfully. "A little while, then a life time apart. Dawn, must I keep repeating that we cannot overlook the truth that every circumstance, every thing we do bring us together? I know it. It is you who are fighting against it."

A sad smile shadowed her face. "I am afraid," she said simply.

"I'll stay close by till morning," he volunteered eagerly.

"It is not the dark that makes me afraid. It is not the jungle either. I am afraid for you, my Tom!"

Tom simulated anger that she should thus impugn his prowess. "For me," he began, but grew quiet at her gesture.

"For both of us," she amended. "I am not afraid to die. But my people will make trouble if I do not go to Malunghu's Temple." She paused. "Tom, I love you!"

"Dawn! Dawn!" Again she was in his arms. "I will not let you go," he breathed softly.

"I love you, I love you!" Her arms encircled him, her chains falling on the rock with a metallic rattle. There was no other sound in the jungle. As they sat there each in the other's embrace dark clouds floated across the moon. The clearing was in darkness.

Pigeon emerged from unconsciousness in the blackness of night. His pained and throbbing head was still full of confused dreams and fantasies.

He debated which direction he should take along the trail, deciding finally to follow it downward in the direction whence Shep had come. That, he felt, would bring him to Mooda's canteen eventually.

After traversing a mile or more the rising sun acquainted the Cockney with familiar landmarks. The effort of walking was bringing back the daze of Shep's blow, and he could not control his senses sufficiently to identify things. A house was outlined in the half light and toward that he directed his uncertain steps.

A short distance from the house he recognized through his fogged senses, as German Military Headquarters. He wondered dizzily how he had managed to retrace his steps without knowing it, but dismissed all thought of it as too puzzling. With a sigh, he sank to the earth, too weak to stand.

He lay there for a time trying to reassemble his wits. He felt safe again, now that he was within call of help. His head pounded steadily and his throat was parched. It was this thirst which finally induced him to drag himself to the hut and up the steps to the entrance. He pounded on the door as vigorously as his tired arms permitted.

In time he succeeded in rousing an Askari guard. The sleepy native, fearful that ghosts were on the prowl, peered cautiously through the half-opened door. He was at first unable to discern the drooping figure of Pigeon and, now certain he had heard noises from the spirit world, was preparing to retreat in haste.

Pigeon, divining his thoughts, frustrated the frightened black's flight by throwing both his arms around his knees. Too terrified to look down on his captor, the black stood there trembling, waiting the ghost to wreak whatever destruction he had in mind. Finally, he screwed up sufficient courage to ascertain what was holding him.

"Pigeon!" he ejaculated in surprised relief. "What are you doin' here?"

"Bring me some water, you bloomin' 'eathen," implored the Cockney, still robust enough to indulge his passion for cursing the black, "water and the Captain."

MORROW SEEKS SEAT IN SENATE

WASHINGTON, May 14.—UP—Seldom have political leaders awaited an announcement by a senatorial candidate, with the intensity aroused by the platform announcement Dwight W. Morrow will make in New Jersey tomorrow night.

Some even regard it as a curtain raiser for the presidential contest of 1932. Morrow may deny he is looking beyond the primary June 17, and the November elections. But many politicians already have their spyglasses trained on him. This active little man has in less than three years leaped from a J. P. Morgan partnership, untangled the Mexican situation as ambassador, participated as an American delegate in the London naval conference and is now back to wrestle in one of the hottest primary fights of the year.

Politicians expect him to declare wet tomorrow. It so, it is possible Rep. Franklin Fort, of New Jersey will enter the primary as a dry, hoping to win against split opposition, because the other entry, former senator Frelinghysen, once dry, has just turned wet. Morrow, an original Hoover man, served as secretary of the Republican National committee during the 1928 campaign at Mr. Hoover's request, after leading a floor fight for him at the Kansas City nominating convention.

Morrow is being assailed in New Jersey as a fair-haired son of the house of Morgan, which is described by Frelinghuysen as the dominating power of a gigantic power trust seeking to control congress.

Morrow has two bridges to cross in the New Jersey primary and election. But, if he gets across, many politicians believe the republican party may witness a titanic three-cornered tug between Mr. Hoover, Morrow and the "breaks" without which no man enters the White House.

PRATT DEFENDS SIX INCH GUNS IN SENATE NAVAL QUIZ

WASHINGTON, May 14.—UP—Two senate committees learned today that London naval parity with Great Britain will cost the United States $1,000,000,000 and that the navy is satisfied with the instrument's protection of national defense.

The famous mystery battleship was rid of its secrecy in the senate foreign relations committee, where Secrtary Stimson was forced into an admission that the American delegates proposed the building of a 33,000 ton warship to create a trading point against the British.

Stimson said, what the Americans wanted was a British agreement to complete modernization of American battleships and that by this means it was attained. Prior to the London conference, the British contended the Washington treaty forbade us to increase elevation of our battleship guns.

Defends Guns

Admiral William V. Pratt, commander in chief of the United States fleet, followed Stimson with a vigorous defense of the six inch gun cruisers and the treaty in general. He revealed that the navy bellieves 10,000 ton cruisers armed with 8-inch guns are not a properly balanced fighting unit. Chairman Borah asked: "Is this treaty satisfactory to you from the standpoint of defense?"

"Yes, sir," Pratt replied, "and I say that remembering that if I had to fight right now, I would have to do the fighting. I would prefer about a 50-50 division of six and eight inch gun cruisers and that is about what we got. I have a definite and recent reason for that, but I don't want to reveal it publicly.

Wouldn't Trade

"If you gentlemen in congress," he continued, "will build up our navy, I wouldn't trade it for the British navy under the treaty."

Pratt, before the foreign relations committee, and Navy Secretary Adams before naval affairs committee, estimated the treaty parity would cost the United States about $1,000,000,000. President Hoover's statement of April 11 estimated the treaty would save about $1,000,000,000 compared to what the United States would have to build without a limitations treaty.

Witnesses were vigorously questioned on treaty relationships between the Japanse and American fleets. Senator Johnson, Repn., Cal., pressed Stimson hard, asserting the United States gave up the right to develop further Pacific naval bases in 1922 in exchange for Japanese acceptance of a 60 per cent naval ration of our fleet.

Japanese Ratio

The London treaty gives Japan an overall ratio of 70 per cent in auxiliary ships. Johnson expressed dissatisfaction with Stimson's explanation of how this came about and said he would continue that line of attack. Similar developments in the naval affairs hearing indicated the question of Japanese naval strength would be among the important issues when the treaty reaches the senate floor.

Chairman Bohar of the foreign relations committee said that he would call Adams, Rear-admiral Hilary Jones and members of the navy general board tomorrow.

HONOLULU, T. H. May 14.—UP—Two amphibian planes that went to the rescue of four men on an army bombing plane when it was forced down in the ocean between the islands of Maui and Hawaii, were prevented from returning here late today on account of rough weather.

Latest advices said two men had been rescued by the amphibians and two were still missing.

The amphibians settled alongside the bomber, shortly after the accident. They were unable to rise again because of the heavy seas.

Those on board the bomber were Lieut. T. L. Boyd, Washington, D.-C., Sgt. H. Alexander, Kennedy Ala. Sgt. Joe Beckerc Brooklyn N. Y. and Private H. L. Cowan, Syracuse.

Dynamite Found On Campus

FORT COLLINS, Colo., May 14.—UP—While male students of Dartmouth College, attried in shorts, tripped sprightly over the campus today, both men and women students of Colorado Agricultural College here, strode gingerly among dynamite strewn about the campus.

One hundred and seventy-five sticks of the death-dealing dynamite were found scattered within a stone's throw of the college buildings by Sheriff O. P. Kelley. They had been stolen from the county road construction camp in Riff Canyon, near here.

The sheriff refrained from expressing an opinion as to whether he believed high school or college students were implicated, although he was convinced that the dynamite was left as a joke.

Parks Horse By Hydrant, Tagged

Finding none, he calmly tied his horse to a fire hydrant, made his purchases and trotted away before a traffic policeman tagged his mount. His name, home and destination were not learned.

*In the U. S. Public Health Reports of 1923, Volume 38, Page 1271, we find the following: "Among short men less than 5 feet 7 inches in height an excess (in weight) of 20% involves an added mortality of 30% above normal. A 40% excess adds 80% to the mortality." We do not represent that smoking Lucky Strike Cigarettes will bring modern figures or cause the reduction of flesh. We do declare that when tempted to do yourself too well, if you will "Reach for a Lucky instead," you will thus avoid over-indulgence in things that cause excess weight and, by avoiding over-indulgence, maintain a modern, graceful form.
